LAUREL GRAY LOVE GOSPIP

Girls love gallant men. Gallantry is a quality of masculine character, easily cultivated and amazing in the rewards it brings with little trouble. Any man who is thoughtful, respectful and polite can add gallantry to his character and find his way made more smooth in the society of women. Men profess to scorn gallantry when they observe it in other men, but this is only an affectation. As a matter of fact, every man has the germ of gallantry in him. It bursts forth when the right smile by the right woman is in evidence. Gallant men need not be dukes or dandies; they need not be measured by the standard of gallantry in the movies or of medieval history. Actually, gallantry is an inner quality. The surface indications cannot always be trusted. Girls whose perceptive faculties are keen as the edge of a sultan's scimitar can detect the difference at first glance between a true gallant and a faker. A real gallant is well-bred, honorable, decent, a regular fellow. A gentleman! The false gallant deceives himself; the false gallant deceives men. But, oh, believe me, gentlemen, the girls know the difference! Aye, girls love gallant men. (Copyrighted)

POLITENESS FOR BEGINNERS By DICK CALKINS

WHAT'S WRONG HERE? ANSWER—Whispering in company is an act of the social outcast, taking it by and large. It implies that the whisperer is whispering about somebody else, and this is a grave offense in our front families, and is often punishable by a blow on the head. (Copyrighted)

BRIEF NEWS

Mrs. Agnes Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Maltz of Weston street, arrived here this week from Detroit, Mich., and will make her home in Southern California. Mrs. Gordon's husband, Warner, was electrocuted August 6 while at his work with the Edison Company in Detroit.
